The most recent incident included in the Freedom of Information Act documents did not appear to be related to an unidentified flying object. On Feb. 13, 2019, a red weather balloon was spotted at 27,000 feet by four aircraft when none were supposed to be in the area. The report concluded ﾟweather balloon released without notifying the appropriate channels.ﾟ
In the very earliest days of coronavirus quarantining, the Zombie Survival Guide and World War Z author ﾟ who also consults on national security for through fellowships at the Atlantic Council and West Point ﾟ teamed with his famous father, Blazing Saddles and Young Frankenstein filmmaker and EGOT winner Mel Brooks, for a soon-to-be viral video explaining the urgency of social distancing.

Max is seen visiting his father's house ﾟ though Mel is on the other side of his kitchen's window glass ﾟ where he makes the case that while the virus may not pose a serious threat to his own health, he could easily transmit to his dad, while Mel could pass it on to folks like Carl Reiner and Dick Van Dyke, wiping out "a whole generation of comedic legends."
