“I did not have the option to say no, ” India added, noting “collateral” often meant handing over damaging information about one’s family. “Saying no meant hurting my family or hurting my friends. And I wasn’t gonna do that. ”

India also recalled the initiation ceremony into DOS where she was unknowingly branded with Raniere’s initials.

“We were told that it was a symbol of the elements and that this was gonna be a bonding experience, ” she said explained. “And we were sleep-deprived. We were starved. We were coerced. ”

India also spoke with People ahead of the upcoming STARZ documentary Seduced: Inside the NXIVM Cult and gave more disturbing details about that night in January 2016.

“I had two women holding my hands and my feet so I wouldn't convulse, ” India told the magazine. “I remember the smell ” of flesh. ”

India’s famous mother helped blow the lid off NXIVM by going public in 2017 as she fought to “save” her daughter.

“I was scared to death but it didn't matter if I was scared, ” Catherine told the magazine. “I knew what I was up against. I knew nobody had dared to do what I was doing because this cult had financially ruined them. ”

India added, “I can't describe in words how grateful I am for that. Because the truth is, I didn't see a future for myself when I was there. I was really kind of committed to being there forever, indefinitely. ”
