The course was created to give Dallas a marquee golf venue that would shine under the spotlight of big amateur and pro tournaments. With AT&T being a longtime sponsor of the PGA Tour, there has been much talk of the Nelson becoming a potential FedEx Cup Playoffs site.Record rains delayed the originally targeted spring opening, but the mild winter and spring rains hastened the grow-in of the zoysia fairways and Champion ultra-dwarf Bermuda greens.

Since that announcement, the other majors made their moves to get to $10 million and now this year The Players has reacted with a $500,000 bump to $10.5 million. That 2013 announcement was done with Ted Bishop, and well, he's long gone from the PGA of America so we'll see if the PGA Championship bumps its purse as well this summer. The Masters stayed at $10 million back in April.
