Crenshaw helped with the original design of the Four Seasons, where the Nelson has been staged since 1983. The tournament will move to its new headquarters no later than 2019. PGA Tour officials have been involved in the process from the start.Turns out, the old dump, capped and topped with vegetation, featured the kinds of humps and hollows inherent in classic courses. The unique layout is spectacular in its simplicity; a seaside links tucked in the forest with dunes, sandy waste areas and native grasses swaying on the rolling hills.

It's always boasted the biggest purse in golf, but in recent years, the other majors have joined the party and pushed theirs to eight figures too.
